

Postgraduate Certificate in Tertiary Teaching and Learning (PGCert Tertiary T&L)

What is it?

The PGCert Tertiary T&L is a postgraduate qualification that enables participants to engage in professional development as tertiary educators to improve their teaching practice.

How does it work?

The PGCert Tertiary T&L comprises four 15-point elective papers. It can be taken over a period of one to four years. Papers are offered in blended and fully online formats.

Who is it for?

The PGCert Tertiary T&L is for those engaged in teaching or facilitation of learning in a tertiary environment. It is suitable for tertiary educators at any stage of their career, and participants can plan their own route through the qualification.

Participants include all levels of academic staff, general staff whose roles include facilitation of student learning, and PhD students / Postdocs who are interested in tertiary teaching careers in the future.

Why do it?

The PGCert Tertiary T&L will give participants insights and better understanding of tertiary education. The University of Waikato, like many other national and international tertiary education providers, encourages its staff in teaching-related positions to undertake a postgraduate tertiary teaching qualification.
