ONGOING SCHOLARSHIP & CONTINUING EDUCATION

Current Medium to Long term Research Activities

Comparative Constitutional Study of the constitutional systems and history of New Zealand, Finland, and Senegal

Developing a jurisprudential model which takes into account the chaotic effects of law's systemic properties, with an eye towards uncovering areas where small changes lead to destabilisation (or stabilisation) of governmental systems.

Creating a paradigm which illuminates our responsibilities and relations to other species, their rights, and deep ecology.

Problems of self-determination, pluralism, and people's moral accountability for their actions and their government.

Exploring whether and how the acoustic separation inherent in complex legal systems is compatible with self-governance.
